Prompt #1

Consider the variety of interests — academic disciplines, extracurriculars, hobbies, pastimes, professional aspirations, etc. — that are important to you and contribute to your identity. Choose at least two that might seem contradictory, and explain how you bring them together.

Prompt # 2

Imagine you have won a grant that will allow you to spend a semester studying anywhere in the world that you have never visited before. Where would you go, what would you study, and why?

Prompt # 3

Provide evidence of your creativity. This may take any number of forms (e.g., a play you wrote, a dance you choreographed, a solo you performed, a study you carried out, an invention you patented, a business you proposed, a service project you developed, a world you envisioned), so long as it is your own work. Make this available to the Honors Council in an electronic format via whatever medium works best (e.g., email attachment, blog post, shared Dropbox folder). In the space below, briefly explain the origin and significance of your work, and explain how to access it if you have not included it as an email attachment.
