Root Diggers and Herb Gatherers: How Wild Plants Shaped Post-Civil War Appalachian Society

September 15, 2015 at 7 p.m.
Peterson Conference Center, First Floor Blackwell Hall
Mars Hill University

Luke Manget, a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Georgia, studies the environmental history of the Southern Appalachian Region. He received his M.A. at Western Carolina University in 2012 and is currently working on a dissertation on the forest economy in Appalachia. His talk will explore the ways in which Appalachia’s wild herbs shaped the region’s development in the decades following the American Civil War.

For more information contact Hannah Furgiuele at 828-689-1571 or hfurgiuele@mhu.edu